

Sisters Elaine Christopher (right) and Chloe Brown (left) of Good2Go distribute free biodegradable trash bags to beachgoers on Mullet Bay beach Easter Monday.

Crusaders spread anti-litter message

MULLET BAY--Amongst all the Easter Monday parties and celebrations on Mullet Bay Beach, sisters Elaine Christopher and Chloe Brown were making sure that partygoers had a good time and took their rubbish home with them.

By handing out free biodegradable trash bags to anyone who had forgotten to bring one, the girls and other volunteers helped to keep the beach clean.

Christopher is a director of Good2Go, the only company in the Caribbean that specialises in sustainable packaging, and her aim is to raise awareness of the litter problem these events can generate.

More than 100 bags were given away to grateful citizens, many of whom took their garbage away with them. However, some picnickers still left their trash behind for others to deal with.

The sisters deemed the Easter Monday bag hand-out a great start, but said there was still a long way to go.